

MADISON TP. SCHOOLS ARE CONDEMNED

REPORT OF NINE BUILDINGS UNSATISFACTORY SAYS STATE HEALTH BOARD.

WILLIAMSON GETS NOTICE

Notice of Improvement Up To Township Trustee. Patrons Asked For Recent Investigation.

C. Vermillion superintendent of Madison County schools, is in receipt of notice of condemnation of nine of the nine school buildings in the township by the Indiana State Board of Health. The letter was written by H. R. Condry, of the State Department of Health, who visited the schools a month ago.

The condemnation notices will be issued in the near future by the Secretary of the Board of Health, and the school trustees are reminded that they must take action to improve the buildings.

The question of improvement of the school buildings will be up to the township trustee, Lawrence Rockhill, and the school trustees. They have taken no action and it is known as to what may be done until the officials meet and map out a campaign.

Inspection of the school buildings was brought about by a petition from one hundred school patrons of the township, who asked that the State Board of Health send a representative to inspect the sanitary conditions. He found eight of the nine buildings in bad shape. One, the Dills School in Madison township, passed inspection.

"ANGER" USED AS SUBJECT OF GOOD SERMON

REV. BRUNER DELIVERS THIRD OF SERMON SERIES SUNDAY NIGHT.

OTHER SPLENDID SERVICES

Pastors of Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist Churches Give Inspirational Talks to Congregations.

Rev. B. H. Bruner gave the third sermon Sunday evening in a series on the Seven Deadly Sins. His subject was, "Anger," and the message was based upon the following three texts: "Be ye angry and sin not; let not the sun go down upon your wrath: neither give place to the devil." Eph. 4:26, 27. And when he (Jesus) had looked round about on them with anger, "Mark 3:5. "Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry; for anger resteth in the bosom of fools." Eccles. 7:9. Rev. Bruner said in part:

"What is anger? It is both a passion and an emotion. It goes back to the roots of life. It has been called the combative and fensive passion or emotion. Anger is a survival of the earliest life of the race. When we stub our toe, hit our finger, or when we are struck by another, we become angry. The purpose of this emotion in the beginning was to arouse men to an immediate defense of himself before reason would have time to suggest the proper means of defense. In the same way anger arouses us to go to the defense of others.

"Anger raises a man above his normal strength. It gives a rare physical courage. It also reinforces moral courage. A man will denounce wrong and tear the mask from hypocrisy and the popular vices of society when he is angry. Anger, in itself, is neither good or bad. It is the gunpowder of the soul; it will either blast away the stronghold of evil, or blow-up and wreck the soul which harbors it. Touched off at the right time and with the right motive back of it, anger becomes a great evil.

"What is the right use of anger? 'Be ye angry and sin not,' suggests that there is a right use of anger. Used rightly anger becomes one of the highest emotions of the soul. There is something lacking in the soul of a man who does not flame out against evil and injustice and hypocrisy. Jesus gives us the perfect example of the right use of anger. Jesus was angry when he faced the sham and hypocrisy of the religious leaders of His day. The language which he used in his 'woes' against the Pharisees fairly burns. Jesus was angry in the presence of those men who were trying to trap him into saying some word which they could use as evidence against him.

"There is need for this kind of anger in the life of the Christian. There are some things in our modern life which, if they do not arouse us to anger, demonstrate that there is no fire left in our souls. There is a grave danger in our day of Christians becoming the sugar of the earth rather than the salt of the earth.

"The anger of Jesus made enemies for him. When our anger flashes out against hypocrisy and injustice and graft in public office, it will make enemies for us. But who said we were supposed to go through life without making enemies?

"You have no enemies, you say. Alas, my friend, the beast is poor. He who has mingled in the fray Of duty that the brave endure Must have made foes! If you have none You've hit no traitor on the hip; You've dashed no cup from perjured lip; You've turned no wrong to right; You've been a coward in the fight! When does anger become sin? Anger becomes sin when it is excited without any sufficient cause, and when it is aroused from purely personal reasons. To become angry over a trifle or because you have been slighted or have not had the proper recognition, is to sin. Anger becomes a sin when it is aroused against a person rather than the evil thing which that person is doing. Jesus was never angry with people. There was no personal resentment in his anger. Anger becomes a sin when it causes us to lose control of our better selves. Anger becomes a sin when it is accompanied by the desire for revenge. It is here that the sin of anger does its most deadly work. The desire for revenge, with its unforgiving spirit, and its desire to damage the character or reputation of even the person of others, is the most un-Christian thing in the world. When anger leads to this it becomes indeed a deadly sin.

"When Paul says, 'Neither give place to the devil' he hints that the devil is back of this anger which becomes sin. The desire for revenge is always the work of the devil, and this spirit which is so often manifested in the lives of people who profess to be Christians is a sure sign that the devil is working constantly even within the Church. Anger under control is one of the highest and most useful emotions; anger uncontrolled, is the best tool of the devil."

First Baptist Church Subject, "Christ's Spirit of Service" Text, Matt. 27:42. "He saved others; Himself He cannot save."

Never was a greater truth spoken by scoffing lips. That which was intended as a jeer, was the proclamation of a principle that was to revolutionize the world. Christ had come to save others, but He could do it only by losing himself.

When Jesus was going about His work, preaching the Gospel, healing the sick, raising the dead, men regarded Him with wonder. His words were so remarkable that they forcibly attracted the attention of the people. His mighty works surpassed those of Elijah and Elisha. Could He do these things unless God were with Him, they asked. Would the Messiah for whom they looked, be able to do mightier works? Had that been a time of independent thought, the people must have owned Jesus as their Messiah. But being in bondage to their religious teachers, they did not dare to go contrary to their opinions, so they wondered and waited. The work of Jesus grew more mysterious as he approached the end of His ministry. When they saw Him on the cross, it was almost impossible for them to believe in Him as the Messiah. Even those nearest Him, those who during His ministry, had said, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." After that last cry rang out, "It is finished," went away saying, "We hoped that it was He that should redeem Israel."

His enemies supposed He would not submit to such a death, if He could help himself. The Messiah they looked for was to abide forever. Could a dead Messiah be the "lion of the tribe of Judah?" So death, to them, was a convincing argument. His career was at an end.

And yet, sometimes men make the most mistakes when they are most sure they are right. We, today, see many things which did not occur then, for had they occurred then, they would not have made the assertion of the text.

But why, if Jesus could have saved Himself, did He not do it? One reason is that He did not wish to do it. He had saved others, and He had the power in His own behalf, though He would not use it. His refusal to save himself did not necessarily prove

JOHNSON ENDS WEEK'S VISIT OVER COUNTY

REPUBLICAN CONGRESSMAN EXPRESSES APPRECIATION FOR SUPPORT IN PAST.

SPEAKS AT COURT HOUSE

Noble Johnson Winds Up Putnam Campaign With Splendid Talk In This City Saturday.

Noble J. Johnson, of Terre Haute, Republican representative in Congress from the Fifth District, ended a week's campaign for re-election in Putnam County with a speech at the court house Saturday afternoon.

He thanked his friends for their support in previous elections. He stated that he tried to do the right thing on the floor of the House and that he would continue to work for his constituents if elected again.

His speech follows: I fully appreciate the support I have received in my campaigns to be your congressman. It is a great honor to represent the 5th District of Indiana. I have learned much since I have been in Congress and feel that I am much better equipped to represent the people of my District than I was when I was first elected. I think the speech of Champ Clark, made while he was Speaker of the House of Representatives, clearly shows the great advantages to the people of any District that keeps the same man in Congress. Mr. Clark said:

"It is a high honor to be a Representative in Congress, if for only one term, and with the number of terms the honor increases in geometrical rather than in arithmetical proportion. A member's usefulness to his country should increase in the same proportion. A man has to learn to be a Representative just as he must learn to be a blacksmith, a carpenter, a farmer, an engineer, a lawyer or a doctor. 'Poeta nascitur non fit'—a poet is born, not made—says Horace; but Congressmen—that is, useful and influential Congressmen—are made largely by experience and practice."

The old Charlotte district in Virginia knew this and kept John Randolph, of Roanoke, in the House till he became a great national figure. Then the Old Dominion sent him to the Senate and General Jackson sent him to St. Petersburg. There are sporadic cases of similar action in other districts.

"It is an unwise performance for any district to change Representatives at short intervals. A new Congressman must begin at the foot of the class and spell up. Of course, the more brains, tact, energy, courage, and industry he has the quicker he will get up. If he possesses these qualities, and if his constituents will keep him in the House, he is as certain to rise as the sparks are to fly upward. No human power can keep him down. It is only fair and rational to assume that every Representative's constituents desire to see him among the 'topnotchers.'"

"Let us take the present House (the 65th Congress) and see how long the men who hold the high places have served. I can not name all, but will cite a few as samples. "Mr. Speaker Cannon is serving his fortieth year. He holds the record for, in pugilistic parlance, 'he holds the belt' for length of service in the House in our entire history. In several Congresses he was chairman of the great committee on appropriations and then was Speaker eight years, only one man, Henry Clay, having been Speaker longer."

I am serving my twenty-second year; Minority Leader Mann is serving his twentieth year; Mr. Kitchen, chairman of Ways and Means, his sixteenth; Mr. Fitzgerald, chairman of Appropriations, his eighteenth; Mr. Moon, chairman of the Post Office and Roads, his twentieth; Mr. Jones, chairman of Insular Affairs and 'father of the House,' his twenty-sixth; Mr. Flood, chairman of Foreign Affairs, his sixteenth; Mr. Hay, chairman of Military Affairs, his twentieth; Mr. Glass, chairman of Banking and Currency, his sixteenth; Mr. Adamson, chairman of Interstate and Foreign Commerce, his twentieth; Mr. Stephens, chairman of Indian Affairs, his twentieth; Mr. Slayden, chairman of the Library, his twentieth; Mr. Henry, chairman of Rules, his twentieth; Mr. Lever, chairman of Agriculture, his sixteenth; Mr. Padgett, chairman of the Navy, his sixteenth; Mr. Lloyd, chairman of Accounts, his twentieth, and Mr. Sparkman, chairman of Rivers and Harbors, his twenty-second. There are other big chairmanships, but these will suffice the show that as a rule the places go to old and experienced Members, for most of the men who rank close to the Chairmen are old-timers. The same thing holds good with reference to members of the minority. As an illustration, Messrs. Gillett and Cooper, who are serving their twenty-fourth year, are the ranking Republicans on Appropriations and Foreign Affairs, almost certain to be chairmen there of should the Republicans ever again have a majority in the House, as in that event, in all probability, Mr. Mann will be Speaker, unless he is nominated for President next June.

"Go through the whole list and you will find, with few exceptions, that the men of long service have the high places."

"New England and the cities of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have understood the value of long service all along, and having elected a fairly good man to Congress, they keep him in the harness."

"The Member of longest consecutive service is called 'the father of the House.' Five Philadelphians in immediate succession bore that honorable title—Randall, Kelly, O'Neill, Harmer, and Bingham. Then it went to Mr. Dalzell, of Pittsburgh. When General Bingham announced the death of General Harmer, his immediate predecessor as 'father of the House,' he stated that the five Philadelphia 'fathers of the House' had served a total of 147, and he served 8 to 10 years after making that interesting statement."

"In the second and third Congresses in which I served, Maine, with only four Members, had the Speakership and the chairmanship of the great Committee on Ways and Means, Navy and Public Buildings and Grounds—a most remarkable circumstance, giving the Pine Tree State an influence in the House and the country out of all proportion to her population and wealth. These four men—Reed, Dingley, Boutelle, and Millikin—each served in the House 20 years or more. Other States might profit by her example."

"No man should be elected to the House simply to gratify his ambition. All members should be elected for the good of the country."

"The best rule, it seems to me, is for a district to select a man with at least fair capacity, industrious, honest, energetic, sober, and courageous, and keep him here so long as he discharges his duties faithfully and well. Such a man will gradually rise to high position and influence in the House. His wide acquaintance with Members helps him amazingly in doing things."

"I can speak freely on this subject without violating the proprieties, for my constituents have kept me here 22 years, and for 20 years have given me nominations without opposition, for all of which favors I thank them from the bottom of my heart. Their generous action and unwavering friendship have enabled me to devote all my time to the public service. I have not been compelled to spend any portion of my time in 'mending my fences.' My constituents have attended to that. 'God bless them.'"

Out of War Clean

Robert Hoover came out of the "war," declared Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, in the United States. "He came out having rendered a great service to the people. He came out at the head of a great army of volunteer citizens, women and children—who, at his request, saved and skimped and thus helped him to conduct that was necessary to

When Are Partners

Ten million women march every morning side by side with men. Steadily the importance of women is gaining not only in the tasks of industry, but in the responsibility. I include the woman who stays at home guardian of the welfare of the nation. She is a partner in the job of the world.—HERBERT HOOVER in his New York speech.

Improves Conditions

In its collective efforts has contributed greatly to the maintenance of the war and to improved conditions of labor. But collective bargaining alone cannot overcome the problem of unemployment. The problem of insuring, full work all the time is a problem of national concern. Workers as citizens at the polls have a large part in determining our economic policies.—HERBERT HOOVER in his New York speech.

GAY MACLAREN

MISS MACLAREN is the brilliant dramatic interpreter who has been called "the girl with the camera mind." She is the pioneer of a new theatrical art which has been taking place audiences by storm in leading cities of the country for the past three years. Her art consists in the presentation of plays without any aid but the simplest stage setting and her wonderful gift of mimicry and memory. She has at her command an amazing repertoire of more than twenty worth plays from popular successes to the Shakespearean classics. She is to appear here soon.

"Gay McLaren is most remarkable in her ability to make her characters live and in holding one's interest from start to finish without the aid of stage setting in any particular," says Mrs. Thomas Edison in commenting on Miss McLaren's art. The wife of the famous inventor might be called a "McLaren fan." At any rate, when ever Miss McLaren appears in New York, Mrs. Edison always reserves a box for herself and friends.

"I shall never forget the time Mrs. Edison first honored me by attending my recital," said Miss McLaren. "I was quite unknown then and struggling like all young artists to get a start. It was a small unpretentious affair in a little church in Orange, N. J. It was in no way a society event and no stretch of the imagination could possibly make it appear as such but Mrs. Edison was interested in the little parish and she came. I had brought my dress over from New York in my suit case and when I started to dress I found that I had forgotten my slippers. We wore high shoes in those days and oh how embarrassed I was when I had to go out on the stage in a pink chiffon dress and black shoes. Mrs. Edison came up to see me after the recital. She had brought me a big bouquet of roses from her garden. When I told her about the shoes she said she had been so absorbed in the characters that she never even noticed them. But you may be sure that I was conscious of them every minute. Mrs. Edison has been one of my patronesses ever since, and she always brings me flowers from her own green houses but every time I see her in a box I unconsciously glance down to see if my feet are properly clad."

Her repertoire this season features her own sparkling play—"Father and Dad." Two other popular successes are available, "Helena's Boys," and "Enter Madame." Miss McLaren is to appear here on the evening of Friday, October 26 at McHenry Hall. She will present Channing Pollock's play "The Enemy" instead of "Enter Madame" as was announced yesterday.

Hoover in Hearts of People

"In my opinion, Mr. Hoover stands in the hearts of the American people equal to any man in the United States. I am sure that there is no member of the Senate who, if he ran for President against Hoover, would be able to poll as many votes as he would poll."—Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska, in 1919.

Boost the Cubs!

Greencastle high school's fast going football aggregation trampled on the Columbus Bull Dogs, 20 to 0 over at Columbus Saturday afternoon. This makes the second straight victory for the Tiger Cubs as they walloped Shelby, 57 to 6 in the opening tilt of the season on Oct. 5.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week, the Cubs will journey into Clay county to meet the strong Brazil grid team. Coach W. E. Bausman, the high school officials and especially the boys on the squad, will certainly appreciate support of Greencastle fans in this clash with old rivals.

Greencastle has a good high school team and the boys deserve more credit than most people really give them. In the first place, the local high school has a small enrollment from which to select a squad of twenty or thirty husky boys to indulge in the gridiron sport, as compared to the larger cities and even schools such as Columbus, Wiley and Brazil.

If a number of business men would motor to Brazil for the game and if the high school student body would charter two or three interurban cars and give the Cubs some noisy rooting from the sidelines Wednesday afternoon, it might help the Purple and Gray athletes to return with the third victory of the season.

A big pep chapel is planned at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning in the high school auditorium. A. L. Trester of Anderson, permanent secretary of the Indiana High School Athletic Association, will speak. All business men and fans are invited to this special chapel. Tickets for the Brazil game can be purchased at the principal's office at the high school until noon Wednesday.

Think over folks. Support the Cubs—beat Brazil!

AT THE VONCASTLE
"Four Walls" Starring John Gilbert Opens To-Day At The Voncastle Theater

It is better to marry the girl that will make one an excellent wife or the beautiful, unrestrained flapper that is the life of every party? This is one of the problems faced by John Gilbert in his new starring picture, "Four Walls," which is now playing at the Voncastle Theater.

Gilbert plays the role of a New York gangster leader "railroaded" to Sing Sing for four years. When he leaves for prison, there are two women left behind who love him. One of them, played by Carmel Myers, moves into his home, helps support his mother, and waits faithfully for his return.

Joan Crawford, who plays the other girl, mourns faithfully for a month and then steps out with "Monk" the chief lieutenant of Gilbert's gang and his enemy. Throughout his years in prison, Frieda continues her butterfly career.

When Gilbert is released from his prison cell he finds both women waiting for him. Each wants his love and the first place in his heart. Which shall he choose?

Gilbert's decision is largely influenced by the fact that he really loves the girl who is the life of the party. But the methods he uses and the struggle he makes to arouse in her a great and noble love before making his own decision, contribute to making "Four Walls" one of the greatest pictures of the year.

William Nigh directs the picture Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer while the cast includes Louis Natheaux, Vera Gordon, Robert Emmet O'Connor, Jack Byron and others. Alice D. G. Miller adapted the script from the stage play by George Abbott and Dana Burnett.

the play of passion is as vivid as in those cruder works where the actors "chew the scenery."

It is a rare art to portray "society" drama convincingly on the screen, but Mr. Stein has done this in the effective story of the wife who wanted to fit a queen bee of the gay whirl, the husband who exacted home duties, and the other man—the rdone—who would lure her off to the dangerous sweets of the social Bohemia. Leatrice Joy, John Boles and H. B. Warner enact perfectly the three main parts, and Senna Owen and Jeanette Loff are good in lesser ones. "Man-Made Women," which opens tonight at the Granada Theatre is Mr. Stein's secretary vehicle in the American screen world—the first having been "The Forbidden Woman." Ernest Pascal wrote the story and Alice D. G. Miller scenarized it.

"THE SINGING FOOL," starring Al Johnson, is a Warner Bros. pictureization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
As gray dawn creeps over the New York skyscrapers, Marcus, the famous revue producer, is leaving the fashionable Plaza night club with a party of four. An actress companion suggests that they go to Blackie Joe's club, where the "fun is just starting," and Marcus consents. At Blackie's shabby club the newcomers are seated at a "wing-side table" by Al Stone, Blackie's head singing waiter and comedian, who wonders who they are. Grace, the pretty cigarette girl, catches the name "Marcus," and hopes the celebrated producer will do something to help Al, whom she admires tremendously.

CHAPTER II

As Al hurried toward the door leading to the bar, Grace speculated as to whether she could cut across and intercept him. But he was moving too fast and there were too many tables in between. She decided to wait until he returned, then she would drop a word as to Marcus's identity. It was necessary for Al to know that, so he could put everything possible into the comic songs he would sing in a few moments.

Grace's sensitive young face was a study in devotion. Al Stone had been her best friend at Blackie's place. When she had taken the job of cigarette girl a few months before, the crowds, waiters, bar-tenders and performers frightened her. The rough-and-ready atmosphere of the place made her timidly draw into herself. Then it was that Al had put his hand kindly on her shoulder and looked down into her apprehensive brown eyes. "Don't be scared, kid. Everybody's all right here."

Two minutes later, Al had forgotten his words, but Grace treasured them and knew them by heart. She had promptly fallen in love with him. Al did not know this, no one knew it, not even Grace herself. She merely knew that the dark, gentle eyes of the young singing waiter had a quality she had never seen in the eyes of another man.

Now he was obscured for a moment as a chorus of dancing girls tripped across the floor. The chorus was agile, but that was all you could say. They were neither graceful nor beautiful.

Marcus, the producer, the connoisseur of femininity, the despot who picked only the loveliest girls for his revues and rehearsed them for months until they were step-perfect—Marcus made no attempt to hide his disdain at this apology for entertainment. Grace saw him turn to the pretty actress at his table with a bored look that said only too plainly: "So this is what you brought me to see!"

Then Grace heard a voice behind her, a rough masculine voice. "Hey, cigarette girl, come here."

She swung about and carried her heaping tray of cigars and cigarettes to a nearby table. Three men, bleary-eyed and uncertain of speech, looked up into her face.

"Want some—cig—cigarettes," said one of them.

Grace lowered her tray for this patron to make a selection and, as she did so, became aware that one of his companions had drawn his chair closer to her.

"Say, you're a nice kid," suggested the second man, with a rapt expression on his face. "Do you know—you're cute. I been watchin' you."

Grace smiled faintly, but ignored him otherwise, while she passed out the cigarettes to the first customer. That was what Blackie and Al had told her to do when the patrons became personal in their remarks—say nothing and attend to business.

As she leaned across the table to hand another pack of cigarettes to Al glanced down at the diminutive Grace and his handsome face softened, as it always did when he reassured her. But in the tenderness of her dark eyes he saw only the gratitude of someone he considered merely a sweet child. To him the marked evidence of acceleration in her breathing and the faint tremor of her warm and lovely little mouth were only her reactions to fright. Nor did he see her head turn, as he moved away, while her eyes followed him adoringly.

Not until he disappeared and the throb of her heart swung back to normal did Grace recall that she had a message for him.

Marcus was here! And now she must wait until Al came from the bar before she told him.

But when the singing waiter reappeared with his four beers on a tray he did not head straight across the big room. Instead he paused in the barroom entrance and glanced down a corridor. Through an open doorway he saw a good-looking blonde girl, a few years older than Grace, seated before a mirror in a tiny dressing room. She was studying her reflection in a self-satisfied way as she slowly and rhythmically brushed her lustrous golden hair. This was Molly Winston, the ballad singer at Blackie Joe's.

Al moved slowly toward the door as if drawn by a magnet, forgetting his order for the moment. His eyes lit up at the sight of Molly and with fascinated gaze he watched her white, rounded, raised arms protruding from her pink silk dressing gown as she slowly manipulated the hair brush.

Molly was undoubtedly a pretty girl and one of the favorites at Blackie Joe's. Yet there was a hardness about her eyes and a petulance discernible at the corners of her mouth that boded no good for the man who would fall in love with her. Al, however, was blind to these defects.

As he neared her dressing room door she saw him, gave him one indifferent glance, then turned to the mirror again to rouge her shapely lips. At that moment of studying her reflection Molly, the heart-song specialist, was gazing at the person she loved best!

AN OCTOBER BLIZZARD

An old time resident of Bloomington calls on the Telephone to tell about an extraordinary snow which struck Indiana fifty-one years ago this week on October 8th, to be more explicit. It was on this occasion that a terrific blizzard and snow storm piled up snow four feet deep on the level most of which remained until the following April.

Never within the memory of the oldest inhabitants had there been a winter as that of the year 1873. In the northern part of the state, fourteen days after the storm broke, nev-that He was helpless. He had lived an unselfish life, and He chose to die an unselfish death. But His selfish enemies were unable to imagine that He could be so unselfish. Submission was an unknown virtue to them, and a voluntary sacrifice of life was beyond their comprehension. So they made a great mistake when they judged the Savior by their own selfish principles. He could be able to save himself, and yet willingly die the death of the cross.

Another reason was that it was a part of the divine plan that He should suffer and die. His death was a part of His saving work. They had a wrong notion of the Messiah and His work. He was carrying out the will of the Father, but it never entered their minds that Jesus was giving His life as a ransom for men. He was not bound to the cross by the power of men. He was held there by the bonds of love—of ties invisible to selfish men. Selfish people never do much toward saving others. If Jesus had come down from the cross, He would have lost His saving power. His word is, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto myself." Men can now put confidence in Him. They know He is absolutely unselfish. The work of saving leads inevitably to self-sacrifice. The unselfish man may be called upon at any moment to make an offering of himself for others, and he need not expect selfish men to understand or appreciate his sacrifice.

A simple laboring man, of whom I have read, was going home from work one evening, his heart glad at the expectation of the greeting awaiting him from his wife and little one. While crossing a bridge, he was stopped by a scream of terror. A child had fallen from its mother's arms into the stream below. The people rushed to the side of the bridge and looked down on the child as it was being swept on by the current. Strong hands kept the frantic mother from leaping into the river after her child. The workman took in the situation at a glance. It was but the work of a moment for him to drop his coat and leap into the river and strike for the child. Why did he, an utter stranger, risk his life? It was because he had an unselfish heart. He never thought of self. Had he perished in the attempt, some perhaps would have pitied him, and others may have called him foolish and weak. The selfish cannot understand the generous deeds of the unselfish. For this reason, the crucified Christ was a "stumbling block" to the Jew; and "foolishness" to the Greeks. The crucifixion of Christ was the crown act of His unselfish life; and it is the ages to come, men will stand around the cross and give Him praise instead of mockery. "He humbled Himself—became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name."

May we honor Him in our heart and lives always.

Methodist Church

At the morning service of worship in the Methodist church, Dr. Taylor took as the text, of his discourse Isaiah 28:16, "Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation stone, a tried stone, a precious cornerstone of sired foundation." He said in part—

Yesterday we engaged in the ceremonies of laying the cornerstone of the house we are building for the worship of God. Today I am interested in trying to interpret the spiritual significance of what we did yesterday. It is at once apparent that what we did is of little consequence so far as the progress of construction is concerned. The builders could have gotten on quite as well without our help. The building would no doubt have been brought to quite as sure and speedy completion had we taken no hand in the matter. If what we did has any value at all that value lies not in the direction of material assistance in matters of construction but rather in the direction of an investiture of the whole building procedure with the spiritual significance which will make the finished structure "the house of God and very gate of Heaven" to us and to all those who in future years will gather within its walls to worship. What then, I ask, is the spiritual significance of our cornerstone laying?

The first thought which occurs to us is that in the laying of that stone we were re-affirming our faith in the foundation values for human life and society which are in Jesus Christ. Upon the stone we had carved this inscription, "Jesus Christ The Chief Cornerstone," which we understand to mean that in him are found certain stable principles of human procedure upon which men may safely and surely base their most ambitious undertakings. So much of human building is based upon self-desire—men build solely for themselves—seeking only selfish gratification. Jesus offers a better way. To those who would build upon the foundation he offers, he says, "The lords of the Gentiles lord it over them and their great ones exercise authority upon them, but it shall not be so among you; if any will be great among you, let him be your minister; if any will be chief among you, let him serve." Only the building which is based upon the desire to serve the common good is securely and well foundationed.

"Voices are crying from the dust of Tyre, From Baalbec and the stones of Babylon— We builded upon self-desire, And perished from the broad gaze of the sun."

We are building this new church structure not upon the desire to please ourselves, but solely upon the Christ purpose to serve in larger way the community and the world.

A second thought, kindred to the first, is, in the laying of that stone we were reaffirming our faith in the Church as a Divinely ordered institution in the world to make effective God's good purposes for men. There are other ways of looking at the Church. Some look upon it as an altogether human institution, human in its origin, human in its operations, and human in its ultimate destiny. Others look upon it as very human in its origin and organization, but Divine in its final goal—the organized and progressive effort of mankind to climb to God. Still others look upon the Church as the organized expression of God's redemptive purpose at work in the world—an institution inspired and motivated by God's own Spirit, his body. Such was Paul's view, and in this view we were sharers in the laying of this cornerstone upon which were carved the words— "Jesus Christ The Chief Cornerstone". We are engaged in preparing for Him a house and an organization through which the redemptive passion of a Father-God can effectively function in this community.

As there are various views concerning the Church, so there are various prophecies for its future. There are some very noisy folks in this day who are shouting at the top of their voices and proclaiming that the Church is a spent force in the world. This is not the first time in history that such announcement has been made. Possibly it may not be the last time. The Church may continue to exist and to carry on in face of all such dire prophecies. There are others who assert that the beneficent spirit of the Church has entered into other social organizations less hampered by traditions and better adapted to serve the social needs of our times. For this reason, the Church is failing to hold for its leadership the most virile youth, who find in other organizations more promising opportunity for the exercise of their powers in the direction of unselfish service. Such was the thesis of President Gleen Frank in his recent address before the Laymen's Council in connection with the Methodist General Conference in Kansas City. In the laying of the cornerstone yesterday, we were affirming our confidence in the continued mission of the Church to make effective in the world the redemptive purpose of the Father-God; we were declaring our unshaken conviction that the Church is still the one social organism through which the good purposes of God in Jesus Christ can best operate in human society.

A final thought which I wish to suggest is this—in the laying of that cornerstone yesterday we were affirming our determination to base and govern all of our activities and endeavors as a church upon unwavering loyalty to Jesus Christ. As every part of the house which we are building will be squared with the stone we laid yesterday, so every part of our church program shall be determined and tested by loyalty to Jesus Christ. We shall want to carry on in the church which we are building an interesting, broad, and varied program. The program which was sufficient for the old churches which are giving place to the new will not suffice for this new day. But the same unwavering loyalty to Jesus Christ which prompted and determined the programs for the old churches shall govern the larger program for the new. "Yea, of Zion it shall be said, 'this one and that one were born in her.' Loyalty to Jesus Christ shall be our constant aim."

Presbyterian Church

Speaking on the subject "A Revelation of Character" in The Presbyterian Church Sunday morning, Rev. V. L. Raphael used as his text John 3:17: "God sent not the Son into the world to judge the world; but that the world should be saved through him." In the Gospel according to John we find continual emphasis on the relation between God and his Son. This takes many angles, but prominent among them is the oft repeated assertion that God sent him into the world. This embodies the ideas of source and mission further carried out in the purpose of the sending. Such a passage as John 8:42 illustrates this thought, "neither have I come of myself, but he sent us." Frequently Jesus finds it necessary to go into the matter of evidence to substantiate his coming from God, for example, "the works that I do bear witness that the Father hath sent me;" "he whom God hath sent speareth the words of God." Additional facts were produced in his life of self-surrender and his teachings. It seemed to be the burden of his mind that the world might know and believe that God had sent him into it.

Having from time to time established the source of his advent the Master was often compelled to make known the purpose of his mission among men. There existed a mistaken idea in his day regarding the essential nature of the Messiah. He was supposed in the minds of many to be a judge. This would include such functions as arbitrator and meeting out punishment to the guilty. Although he states that the Father hath given him authority to execute judgment yet he does not avail himself of this privilege. Instead he proclaims that God did not send him into the world to judge it. At one time when he was asked by a man to order his brother to divide the inheritance with him, Jesus replied by asking the man "who made a judge or divider over you?" Again when a woman accused of infidelity was brought before him to Pharisees sought to trap him by asking if he approved of stoning her even as Moses had commanded. When upon his suggestion that he that was without sin should first cast a stone at her, everyone withdrew without even one doing it. Jesus said "neither do I condemn thee; go thy way; from henceforth sin no more."

In contrast to being a judge our Lord said that God sent him that the world should be saved through him. It is almost impossible to imagine Jesus going up and down Palestine judging and condemning men and women for their sins. But it inspires us to think of him in his office as Savior. This is positive and constructive, summoning the world to be saved through believing in him. A corollary to this is the encouraging fact that he came to seek and to save that which was lost. Instead of discouraging man in his helpless condition of bondage to sin he came to set him free. He does not scold men for their past but he inspires them with hope for the future and expects renunciation of that which has gone on before.

Hitchcock Lauds Hoover

Senator Hitchcock (Dem., of Nebraska), Administration leader in the Senate, quoted in Herbert Hoover's behalf in the Senate January 23, 1919 said then:

"I know something of the struggle Mr. Hoover has had with the packing combines in the United States, and I want to say that if there had not been a Hoover and a Food Administration, the packers would have made a great deal more than they did make. Mr. Hoover has been vindicated. He came out of the war, I believe, with a better reputation than any other public official."

The judge also hinted that if a woman makes a plea and the husband doesn't appear, a bench warrant will be issued for his appearance, which if he does not heed, will subject him to drastic procedure.
